

ABSTRACT

In a networked environment, an inferred proximity of one or devices to another device is determined. The inferred proximity is determined, for a particular one of the one or more devices, based at least in part on which port 5 of a network switch the particular device and the other device are coupled to.